A Word from Our CEO

Since joining the Better Business Bureau in November, I can sincerely say I am so impressed with our team and what the BBB does for our community. I never knew all the impressive work the BBB does, and the dedication everyone takes to ensure they uphold the utmost standards.

The BBB’s mission is to be the leader in advancing marketplace trust. We are purpose-driven. This is our guiding principle, which also sets the stage for our organization’s culture. I can confidently share that our Team understands the values and importance of our mission and vision. We are so much more than a place to process complaints, and I hope all of our Accredited Businesses and the whole community utilizes all of our benefits provided.

We are moving forward into 2022 financially strong, focused on helping our community and demonstrating our Mission through:

- Setting standards for marketplace trust

  120,012 Individuals utilized our BBB Services to verify businesses they were interested in working with, 1,148 published reviews, 1,813 Complaints were filed and our Team helped to mediate resolutions.

- Encouraging and supporting best practices by engaging with and educating consumers and businesses

- In this first quarter of the year, we have provided educational support to our Schools and Community Groups through 72 Scam Buster presentations serving over 1,833 people.

- Celebrating marketplace role models

- During this first quarter of 2022, we have been welcoming Trust and Torch Award Sponsors, and our Team is collecting thousands of dollars in sponsorships to fund Scholarships.

- Calling out and addressing substandard marketplace behavior

- Our Team has helped in sharing over 60 news and radio spotlights to share recent scams in our communities to help protect consumers.

- Creating a community of trustworthy businesses and charities

- Over 230 businesses and charities have applied for and met the BBB Standards of Accreditation.

BBB sees trust as a function of two primary factors - integrity and performance. Integrity includes respect, ethics, intent, and working toward a diverse, inclusive and equitable marketplace. Performance speaks to a business’ track record of delivering results in accordance with BBB standards and/or addressing customer concerns in a timely, satisfactory manner.

We strive every day to deliver added value to our community spanning 38 counties throughout Western Michigan. Great pride is taken in expanding our presence in our footprint and trying to educate on how much we do at the BBB. So many people think we are just about filing a complaint; however, there is so much more that goes into our benefits.

One benefit that stands out is the opportunity for Consumers and Businesses to work together to resolve outstanding issues. The BBB helps Consumers and Businesses communicate, rather than idly placing derogatory reviews on websites that don’t allow for communication leading to resolution and establishing further trust in the marketplace. We shine a light on businesses that are Trustworthy and those that are not. We are here for our entire marketplace to serve our Consumers and Businesses together.

I hope you enjoy reading the April issue of the Beacon, and invite you all to reach out to our team to help ensure you are taking advantage of your full Accreditation the Better Business Bureau has to offer.

You hear about it on the news, but you don’t think it will happen to you. You own a small business. Why would hackers and other bad actors target you for a cyber attack? The truth is, in many cases small businesses are among the best targets for these attacks. That’s because they are typically less prepared than many large companies with well-funded IT departments. So how does a business owner protect their company, employees and customers? For many it’s a multi-step process that includes Cybersecurity Insurance.

“Cyber insurance made its entry into the marketplace about ten years ago. And we probably sold very little of it back then,” says Kim Slager, a partner at BHS Insurance. “Now nearly every client we put it in front of takes it. If you’re not being presented with an option by your insurance agent, you should be asking.”

So what is cyber insurance? Cyber insurance can be purchased as an add-on to your current policy or as a separate policy. But BHS Insurance says the add-ons usually have lower coverage levels and benefits than the stand-alone policies. These policies can cover a range of issues connected to a cyber attack, including:

- A Breach Response Coach
- Response assistance
- Legal assistance
- Forensic Investigation
- Coverage for lost income
- Notification costs and public relations
- Ransomware/Cyber Extortion coverage
- Digital data recovery
- Liability coverage
- Regulatory fines and penalties

“The best thing about these policies is breach response assistance,” says Slager. “You have the bad day and you don’t know who to call to help you. You call that 1-800 number. That’s the breach coach and they walk you through what happened and how to move forward.”

This is important, because it’s expertise many small businesses don’t have. How a business responds can have a huge impact on if they are able to resume work, how long it may take, and how much it will cost. Having an expert a phone call away is a big protection.

The insurance itself is a lot different than it was originally. Last year, seven insurance carriers collaborated to create new protocols in response to the increase in cyber attacks. Coverage now often requires a business to take a number of steps to make sure they are doing what they can to prevent an attack from taking place. This includes using multi-factor authentication, cyber security training including phish simulation testing, encrypting your data and backups, utilizing endpoint detection and response and having an incident response/disaster recovery plan, amongst other measures. While the original cyber insurance applications were a simple one-page form, the new applications require some work and expertise to complete properly.

“Cyber applications need to be completed with an internal or external IT team,” says Slager. Companies that attest to having certain security procedures and practices in place could have a claim denied if it turns out they didn’t. “The application process in and of itself can be an eye-opening experience.”

So how does a business get started? Reach out to your insurance agent and discuss the options available. Many businesses will want to start early so they can make some internal changes. “We’re working with our clients at least 90 to 120 days in advance,” says Slager. “This makes sure that the business can get protocols in place with IT provider to pay best-in-class rates. It should pay for itself.”

The number of attacks on businesses of all sizes in Michigan continues to grow. So it is critical your business is prepared. “We’re providing cyber insurance to back up the hard work that your IT team is doing,” says Slager. “If you don’t have the coverage, I strongly encourage you to be talking to your insurance provider to go over options.”

BHS is a BBB Accredited business, and recently took part in a Trust Lab Speaker Series event focused on cyber security. You can find a recording of that event on the BBB Serving Western Michigan’s YouTube channel.

Nothing says summer in Michigan more than an evening at the baseball field. Turtle Creek Stadium in Traverse City, Michigan is the perfect place to catch a Pit Spitters game. The upcoming season is a wonderful time to take your baseball experience to the next level. From suites, to patios, to unique events, Turtle Creek Stadium has something for everyone.

Elevate your baseball experience with a luxury suite. Great for employee appreciation or entertaining clients of 12 or more, the luxury suites are climate-controlled, have private bathrooms, access to a private bar, and provide a great view of the field. Groups can also have their suite catered with a dedicated server.

If you prefer sitting outside, there are three hospitality decks for groups of 20 or more. Entertain coworkers or a group of friends at high top tables, with more open space for socializing. The Bullpen Terrace and 4Front Porch are right along third base, making it the perfect place to watch the pitchers warm up.

“The players walk right by the decks along third base,” says Sam Connell, Director of Sales with the Traverse City Pit Spitters and Turtle Creek Stadium. “It’s a great place to catch an autograph or meet a player as they head out onto the field.”

Groups at any of the hospitality decks can also enjoy a 90-minute all-you-can-eat buffet.

The fun isn’t contained to game days. Consider Turtle Creek Stadium for your next company picnic, or corporate meeting. Entertain employees with batting practice, a kickball game on the field, or a movie night.

“Companies can hold a meeting or retreat at our facility and we will pull out the batting cages to get a few swings in and enjoy the fact they’re at a baseball field,” says Connell.

There’s an affordable option for any group. Turtle Creek Stadium is flexible to make every event fun and creative. Whether you’re looking for first pitch opportunities, facility tours and player meetings, or a way to catch a game on the lawn with coworkers, there’s a group package to fit your plans.

Planning a group outing at the stadium doesn’t have to be stressful either. Dedicated ticket representatives can help plan every detail to make it a smooth and enjoyable experience.

“Our goal is to make sure the guests have fun and enjoy an experience they can’t get anywhere else,” says Connell.

Is it a scam or is it real? That’s the question posed by the Better Business Bureau® to students across West Michigan since December 2018. Each school year, more than 3,000 students take part in the BBB Scambusters program. It is a game designed to teach people tricks to spot scams. The focus of the game has been on students because, over the years, studies have shown that young people are the most likely age group to lose money to scams. The goal is to reach young people before they go out on their own. The game teaches about common scams, but also reinforces the message that they need to be wise consumers. It is important that they research a company before making a purchase, looking for organizations that have a track record of Trust and Ethics.

While Scambusters has focused on students, the BBB Educational Foundation has provided our Fighting Financial Fraud series for adults, especially seniors. While young people are the most likely to lose money to a scam, seniors lose the most money each year.

Based on a request, the BBB Educational Foundation recently did Scambusters to an adult group at a church in Ada. The group of older adults played the game and enjoyed the lesson and engagement. Based on this success, the BBB Educational Foundation is expanding the offering to groups of all ages. If you know of a group that would like to learn about scams and how to avoid them, in a fun game setting, please contact the Better Business Bureau Educational Foundation. You can learn more at nnn.org/wmiprograms or by emailing Troy Baker at troy@westernmichigan.bbb.org.

These webinars have become an extraordinary resource for businesses that are interested in growing their online presence. Randi Penfill is our Midwest Grow with Google expert and co-host. “The goal of these webinars is to bring Google products to businesses and meet them where they are at,” she says. Businesses can come into these training sessions with any range of expertise and enhance their knowledge and understanding of a given topic.

We know that setting aside time to learn a particular program or skill can be daunting in an already busy schedule. These hour-long sessions help to attack topics head on and in bite-size pieces, so that the learning is presented directly to you. As you know, the digital landscape is always changing. By attending webinars put on by the changemakers themselves, you will always be at the forefront of innovation.

From getting your business online to marketing it with Google Ads, Google products have become a necessary tool in running a successful business. One of the most recent sessions we hosted delved into Google Ads. Google processes 8.5 billion searches each day, and Google Ads ensures that your business is at the top of the results. In the session, we went through the process of creating an ad for your business from start to finish. Businesses like yours learned how to select successful keywords and target audiences for your specific industry. Most importantly, we were introduced to the topic in a welcoming and easy-to-comprehend manner.

The Grow with Google program is wrapping up its first set of sessions for 2022, but the BBB will be offering them again soon. We encourage all BBB accredited businesses to take advantage of this free opportunity to enhance their business knowledge.

Your Ticket to More Exposure on BBB.org

One of the most important elements of BBB Accreditation is when consumers/buyers view your Business Profile within BBB.org. Did you know that there are over 100,000 business profile views a month on BBB.org in West Michigan? We know that buyers are checking profiles prior to purchase to look for and investigate whether they can Trust that company. Your BBB Accreditation further demonstrates a business' trustworthiness. In addition to using the BBB Accredited Business logo, maximizing the number of views of your profile will only help your business excel.

You may be aware that any business can be listed on BBB.org as we serve consumers who wish to research businesses in the marketplace. What differentiates Accredited Businesses from others is that Accredited Businesses are clearly identified with the logo and studies show viewers are absolutely more inclined to click on Accredited Businesses versus those that are not. Additionally, when searching BBB.org, there is the option to only include Accredited Businesses in the search criteria.

Enhanced Listings allows even more presence and visibility within the search and are only available to Accredited Businesses. These listings ensure the Business will be positioned at or near the top of the list of Businesses when a consumer does a search. For example, if an individual wanted to find or check on the trustworthiness of a roofer in a particular area of West Michigan, the results generated will first show those that are participating in the Enhanced Listing Program and then lists the businesses geographically and highlights whether they are Accredited or not.

There are a number of options available to Accredited Businesses for this preferred placement. The graphic on the next page shows the main slots available for the program and we strongly encourage you to consider participating, as the number of slots available is limited for every type of business. These prime positions allow you to stand out from others and be one of the first companies seen when a search is done on BBB.org.

You may have seen an email from your Account Manager about the program as well. Please reach out directly to your Account Manager for assistance or email us at ABHelp@westernmichigan.bbb.org for further information.

Uno de los elementos más importantes de la acreditación BBB es cuando los consumidores/compradores ven su perfil de negocio en BBB.org. ¿Sabía que hay más de 100,000 puntos de vista de perfil de negocio al mes en BBB.org en West Michigan? Sabemos que los compradores están comprobando los perfiles antes de la compra para buscar e investigar si pueden confiar en esa compañía. Su acreditación BBB demuestra aún más la fiabilidad de una empresa. Además de utilizar el logotipo BBB Accredited Business, maximizar el número de puntos de vista de su perfil sólo ayudará a su negocio a sobresalir.

Es posible que sepas que cualquier negocio puede aparecer en BBB.org ya que servimos a los consumidores que desean investigar negocios en el mercado. Lo que diferencia a los negocios acreditados de otros es que los negocios acreditados están claramente identificados con el logotipo y los estudios muestran que los espectadores están absolutamente más inclinados a hacer clic en los negocios acreditados versus los que no lo son. Además, al buscar en BBB.org, existe la opción de incluir sólo los negocios acreditados en los criterios de búsqueda.

Los anuncios mejorados permiten aún más presencia y visibilidad dentro de la búsqueda y sólo están disponibles para los negocios acreditados. Estos listados garantizan que el negocio se sitúe en o cerca de la parte superior de la lista de negocios cuando un consumidor hace una búsqueda. Por ejemplo, si una persona quería encontrar o verificar la fiabilidad de un techador en una zona particular de West Michigan, los resultados generados primero mostrarán aquellos que participan en el Programa de Listados Mejorados y luego enumerarán los negocios geográficamente y resaltarán si están acreditados o no.

Hay un número de opciones disponibles para los negocios acreditados para esta colocación preferida. Este gráfico muestra las ranuras principales disponibles para el programa y le recomendamos encarecidamente que considere la posibilidad de participar, ya que el número de ranuras disponibles es limitado para cada tipo de negocio. Estas posiciones privilegiadas le permiten destacarse de los demás y ser una de las primeras empresas que se ven cuando se realiza una búsqueda en BBB.org.

Es posible que también hayas visto un mensaje de correo electrónico de tu gestor de cuentas sobre el programa. Póngase en contacto directamente con su gerente de cuentas para obtener ayuda o envíenos un correo electrónico a ABHelp-westernmichigan.bbb.org para obtener más información.

A conversation with Brian Sommerdyke, Treasurer and Service Manager

BBB: For those who don’t know, what is Paul J. Sommerdyke Plumbing?

Brian Sommerdyke: The company was started by my father Paul and my uncle Mut, their nicknames were Mut and Bear, hence the bear on the hat. They started this business in 1954 in a building that used to be an old fruit market. We do commercial, industrial and residential plumbing.

BBB: You have been in business for nearly 70 years. What makes you stand out?

Brian Sommerdyke: Well, for one thing we’ve been in business for so many years, we have an A+ rating with the Better Business Bureau. We’ve got a good customer base. We get most of our business from word-of-mouth recommendations. We’ve always been fairly priced and our main goal is to help the customer.

BBB: How important are those referrals to your business?

Brian Sommerdyke: Very. Because you know that you pleased that customer enough to let one or two other people know that we’re a good company to call. As you know, word of mouth is one of the biggest advertisements of business.

BBB: What does it mean to you to be BBB Accredited for 50 years?

Brian Sommerdyke: Kind of amazing, really, when you think about it. That’s quite a bit of time. To be in business that long and still have that good record with the BBB, that means quite a bit. For you to be here interviewing me and giving us a special plaque, right there shows the importance of that.

BBB: What does 50 years of BBB Accreditation say to your customers?

Brian Sommerdyke: I think that it shows them that we indeed are trustworthy. You know, someone you can depend on when you call them and they’re going to do good work and they’re going to stand behind their work. When you call us, you can trust in us.

CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY THRIVES AMID SUPPLY CHAIN CHALLENGES

“The industry is very strong,” says Josh Szymanski, Chief Strategy Officer with Owen-Ames-Kimball Co. “Architects are drawing, contractors are bidding and everyone is working.” The construction business is thriving. The demand for new projects and remodels is keeping everyone in the industry busy, especially after the pandemic.

“We found ourselves in what I would say is the biggest boom the construction industry has probably ever seen, but certainly in my lifetime,” says Nick Hutcherson, owner of Hutcherson Construction. “Which leads to the biggest issue these days is labor and really developing a pipeline of youth and workers for the future.” It’s a demand felt across all industries. But for one that is seeing a large boom, the effects of low employee numbers feels more significant.

“I think as an industry, we need to do a much better job of focusing on educating young people about what the opportunities are and show them that there’s a lucrative future that exists for them that does not necessarily involve a four-year college degree,” suggests Hutcherson.

A bigger focus on the value of employees and people has helped businesses like O-A-K maintain that workforce and continue the supply of workers coming in.

“The bar’s been raised across the industry and the statistics show that,” says Szymanski. “It’s an overall much safer place to work.”

Even with happy workers and making adjustments, today’s limited and unreliable supply chain is causing headaches for those trying to keep job lengths at a minimum. The construction industry is used to pivoting to meet the needs of their clients. Adaptation is key in an industry that is always changing and evolving.

“We ask people to have a little grace and just be flexible,” says Szymanski. “There may be material changes, but you don’t have to sacrifice quality. If your tile is from Italy, it may take longer to get here compared to a North American source. We’ve seen a lot of substitution choices based on what’s available.”

When it comes to labor, getting creative is keeping business running smoothly.

“Two years ago we averaged about 14 crews that we ran on a daily basis,” says Hutcherson. “Right now we have seven. So figuring out how to optimize the crews that we do have to continue to maintain revenues and the level we were producing with 14 crews.”

The hurdles of the industry should not discourage those looking to start a new project. Both O-A-K and Hutcherson Construction have similar advice for those looking at their next build.

“Gather your team early,” says Szymanski. “This has always been important, but has become even more important now to have everybody at the table early on so we are all working within the scope, schedule and budget as a team and the expectations are realistic to the market today.”

“Encourage the consumer to be proactive and give themselves ample time to select the contractor they want to work with and allow time for those contractors to get the material ahead of when the work needs to actually be completed,” says Hutcherson. “Understand that any contractor that’s worth working with, is likely facing significant work backlogs, so be willing to wait.”
In a market saturated with companies vying for customers, BBB Accreditation gives consumers confidence that they’re dealing with an ethical and vetted business.

In a survey of 14,000 BBB Accredited Businesses, here’s what businesses say about their BBB Accreditation:

- 69% say BBB Accreditation increases the credibility of their business
- 66% say BBB Accreditation demonstrates integrity in their business practices
- 65% say BBB Accreditation builds consumer trust
- 63% say BBB Accreditation increases their visibility as a reputable business
- 52% say BBB Accreditation differentiates their business

“All of the good workers already have jobs.”

It's a statement business owners in all industries hope is wrong. But for many in the construction trades, it is closer to the truth than many would like to admit. Increased demand has led to increased competition. Companies are left to hire workers today that they probably wouldn't have considered three or four years ago. So how do you make sure you give the employees you do hire the right training, and ensure they aren't a liability to themselves, their coworkers and the company?

“Training is imperative,” says Michael Burns, owner of Active Training Consultants. “Look how much it costs to actually hire somebody. You go through the hiring process, first, second, sometimes third interviews. Background checks, sometimes a physical or drug test. You are wrapping up time and money in the hiring process.” Doing it again takes time away from the work your company needs to do.

With demand high, it is tempting to rush new workers onto the job. But Burns says it is important to make sure you take the time to properly train employees on not just the job they will be doing, but on safety issues. It’s part of investing in your people. Along with things like pay and benefits, how you prepare and safeguard your staff has a big impact on your company culture.

“My number one asset are my people that do the work, and I have got to put some time and effort into this,” says Burns. “These people are representing my company. I want to make sure they have top-notch training and that they are going home every day after work.”

That often means having the right people conduct the training. It may not necessarily be the one who has worked for the company the longest. Instead, look for people who best represent what you want in a worker. Let the new employees see the people you want them to model. With different hiring standards, it may also mean being OK with that new employee training longer. As frustrating as that may be to employers, a few extra days training and job shadowing is still faster than starting the hiring process over.

As for the training itself, it is critical that it includes time focused on safety. Burns says OSHA is on the lookout for job sites that are failing to meet safety standards. These violations can lead to fines and additional expenses for the business. But having an on-site incident or injury can be even more problematic for a company. There are medical and insurance costs. The employees who witnessed the incident are impacted as well. Add in fines and potential legal action, and taking the time up front to make sure people are safe makes a lot of financial sense. “There’s been studies out there that show for every dollar spent on a safety program, there’s a four and a half, five dollar return on investment,” says Burns.

So what should a business focus on? It depends on the specific business and industry. Burns recommends OSHA 10 training, which takes time, but covers a lot of ground on the safety front. Other things safety training should cover include:

- Safety Data (SDS) Sheets
- Know who is CPR Certified
- Who do you report incidents to?
- Where would you find a first aid kit and AED?

“Take the time to train somebody properly and not be so worried about how far we are behind. We are always going to be behind. That’s been drilled into our skulls since day one,” says Burns. “There’s nothing that we make in this world that’s worth your life.”

You probably noticed it. Customers are different than they used to be. Distrust is now society's default emotion. According to the 2022 Edelman Trust Barometer report, nearly 60% of people surveyed say their default tendency is to distrust something until they see evidence it is trustworthy. A healthy skepticism can be a good thing for customers, but a perpetual state of distrust makes your life as a business leader more difficult. Honest mistakes are no longer innocent errors, they are proof you are trying to rip someone off. Customers expect the worst. So how do you break through? This is where the Better Business Bureau's 5 Gestures of Trust can help. The BBB Educational Foundation has been speaking to business groups on these 5 Gestures for a few years, and the message is more important today than ever.

Breaking through a lack of trust starts with your company culture. It starts with you, the business leader. These 5 Gestures of Trust should be the bedrock of your business, the base that creates a trust and respect through your organization and community. How do you make customers trust you when they come in the door the first time? By having a reputation of being the place everyone knows can be trusted.

Honest: You do what you say you are going to do. If you are not seen as honest, the rest doesn’t matter. You may be the best roofer, plumber or mechanic in the world. But if customers see you as dishonest, they won’t do business with you.

Transparent: Share information with the customers, even information that might make you vulnerable. Be clear about your pricing and terms. Don’t hide behind the fine print. Explain the “why” to customers.

Proactive: Take care of issues before they happen. Empower employees to solve problems for customers and make it right.

Humble: Be willing to be vulnerable. Admit when you make a mistake and make it right. “I’m sorry, we messed up and didn’t live up to the standards we strive for” is a perfectly acceptable answer. If you admit the mistake and make it right, it will help build trust with customers when things go wrong.

Equitable: Giving power to others, even when you don’t have to. Have a generous return policy. Clear and simple contracts. Treat customers and employees the way you would want to be treated if you were in their shoes.

All of this seems simple, but for many businesses it isn’t. It requires business leaders to be intentional about their behavior and their company culture. These qualities start with how you treat your team. Being honest with workers, transparent about decisions and “why” the company is doing things, proactive about issues that affect workers, admitting when leadership makes a mistake and treating employees the way you would want to be treated. The same report from Edelman found 78% of employees say they have higher expectations for a prospective employer than they did three years ago. In today’s hiring environment, workers can be more selective. They are putting a greater emphasis on company culture. If you want to attract and keep quality employees, you have to not only show them respect, you need to empower them to do their job and grow.

But how does that translate to the customer? Your employees are the face of your business. We have all seen businesses where the workers are miserable. As customers we can tell, and the customer service suffers. Even if nothing went wrong, you don’t walk away with a good feeling about the organization. On the other hand, we all know businesses where employees always seem to be in a good mood. That translates to better service and a better customer experience. Happy people on the floor, phones or cash register can make a huge difference for customers. Smiles are contagious. Setting your employees up to be happy in their work environment makes a bigger impact on your customer than you may think.

In the end, it all comes down to Trust. Building a foundation of Honesty, Transparency, being Proactive, Humble and Equitable with both customers and employees is key to growing Trust. Your company’s reputation is everything, so have that strong foundation based on the 5 Gestures of Trust.

The Better Business Bureau Educational Foundation provides a 5 Gestures of Trust presentation to business groups free of charge. If you would like to book one, or learn more, go to bbb.org/wmiprograms or contact Troy Baker at troy@westernmichigan.bbb.org.
From investing to payments, cryptocurrency is a growing trend for consumers and companies. But it is also a growing trend of scammers. A new in-depth investigative study by the Better Business Bureau® (BBB®) – Cryptocurrency scams: BBB study finds lack of regulation and consumer education results in dramatic increase in fraud and financial losses – examines digital currencies and the scams that use them. According to the new study, more than 2,400 complaints were made to the BBB in 2021, resulting in losses of nearly $8 million. This is a significant increase from previous years.

According to the 2021 BBB Scam Tracker Risk Report, cryptocurrency scams have become the second riskiest type of scam that victims encounter. The scams are targeting both consumers and businesses. Reports sent to the BBB about fraudulent activity involving cryptocurrency have tripled in the past three years. The actual number of victims is much higher as most fraud victims do not report it.

BBB Scam Tracker data shows that cryptocurrency scams most commonly originate on social media.

A Grand Rapids man found what he thought was a cryptocurrency investment company through TikTok. The scammer asked him to invest $100 and he would see returns in the thousands within 24 hours. When the man tried to withdraw his money, the scammer said the machine was broken and another $100 would be needed to fix it, on top of extra fees he would need to pay to remove his money. After hundreds of dollars were transferred with no way to remove his “investment gains,” the man realized he had been scammed.

“Cryptocurrency is gaining attention for its volatility and novelty, but scammers are figuring out how to use people’s lack of knowledge about cryptocurrency to rip off investors and

CRYPTOCURRENCY is a digital payment system that does not rely on banks to verify transactions. It is a form of digital money that uses encryption technology that can enable anyone to send and receive payments anonymously. It allows person-to-person sharing anywhere in the world without any central authority, such as a bank, tracking transactions or reporting to any government agency. Transactions are not reversible and do not offer many of the safeguards that protect users of traditional financial systems. Cryptocurrencies can be purchased at special ATMs, online or at exchanges through bank wiring, credit cards, payment apps and even gift cards.
bring new life to old scams,” says Lisa Frohnapfel, President and CEO of the Better Business Bureau Serving Western Michigan. “Cryptocurrency companies do not have to follow the standard safeguards regulators put in place to protect your finances, making it harder for those victimized by scammers to ever see their money again.”

Scammers are using cryptocurrency in a variety of ways. In investment scams, cryptocurrency is used for Ponzi schemes, initial coin offerings and even bitcoin mining. Scammers are also using cryptocurrency as a new payment method for old scams like the fraudulent sales of goods online. BBB sees more victims attempting to pay for pets online with cryptocurrency than in years past. Cryptocurrency is also becoming the preferred method of payment in romance scams but is also showing up in advance fee loan scams and employment scams. On the business side, It is used as a payment method in ransomware attacks and in tax and utility scams.

Tips to avoid cryptocurrency scams:

- Safeguard your digital wallet. If you lose the key, your funds are gone permanently.

- Look carefully at email addresses and website addresses. Phishing scams will try to trick you into logging in and then steal your log in credentials. Do not use a generic search online to find cryptocurrency companies. This can lead to fake sites which impersonate real companies. Be especially careful when viewing these on a phone.

- Be wary when paying for products with cryptocurrency. No one with the government will ever ask for this form of payment.

- Beware of fake recovery companies. Scam companies sometimes claim that they can recover stolen money – for a fee. These are usually scammers as well.

- Watch out for fake reviews & celebrity endorsements. The 2021 BBB Risk Report revealed survey respondents were unable to tell a fake review from a real one. Celebrity endorsements are often not authorized and even if they are, the celebrity may be paid for the effort and may not know more about it than you do.

- Be wary of “friends” who reach out to you on social media and tell you how they made money with cryptocurrency. Accounts are frequently compromised.

- Only download apps from Google Play or the App Store. Trusted app stores do not eliminate the threat of app scams, but they do offer a basic level of protection. Be careful with apps as some may contain malicious software.

- Do not believe promises of guaranteed returns. No one can guarantee how an investment will perform, especially in the volatile cryptocurrency market. If someone guarantees a return, this is a red flag.

If you are a victim or are targeted by a scam involving cryptocurrency, there are resources to help you, but you must report it first.

The impact of the COVID Pandemic on nonprofits focused on the Arts

by Jeannie Gregory

Heather Lane-Fowler remembers with great clarity the day the COVID-19 Pandemic impacted her nonprofit, Cereal City Concert Band, despite the two years that have passed.

“We had just had our second rehearsal to prepare for our April concert,” shares Lane-Fowler, who serves as treasurer and publicist of the Battle Creek nonprofit. “We had great plans for this concert: ‘American Dream’ and immediately following the concert we were hosting a Sponsor Appreciation Reception. Posters and invitations had already been printed; venue, food, drinks and musical entertainment arranged. When it was apparent things were shutting down fast, the Board quickly decided that we needed to keep our members safe above all else, so cancelled the concert and reception.”

No one knew just how devastating the pandemic would be to nonprofits as time marched on, but particularly those devoted to the arts. Each organization had to come up with “outside of the box” solutions to the incredible loss of revenue due to the inability to not only gather and perform, but also to raise funds.

And, indeed, the impact has been devastating. These astounding figures were released by Americans for the Arts “COVID-19 Pandemic Impact on the Arts” dated March 14, 2022. “As of July 2021, financial losses to the nation’s nonprofit arts and culture organizations were an estimated $17.97 billion. 99% of producing and presenting organizations cancelled events during the pandemic—a loss of 557 million ticketed admissions impacting both arts organizations and audiences.”

But that wasn’t the only impact, according to their research. “Additionally, local area businesses—restaurants, lodging, retail, and parking—were severely impacted by cancelled arts and culture events with a loss of $17.6 billion in audience ancillary spending. Local government revenue losses were $6.0 billion and 1.03 million jobs were negatively affected because of cancelled events.”

The pandemic was something the leaders of the Cereal City Concert Band certainly hadn’t encountered since the organization’s inception in 1987. Lane-Fowler is one of 3 active band members of the original 14, with the band actually being started as “Uncle Sam’s Band.” That first year the band played 26 engagements and continued that devotion to music throughout the years. The band reorganized in 1992 and was recognized as a 501c3 nonprofit and evolved with its current moniker and features approximately 50 members, ranging from the ages of 16-85.

The impact continued for the band throughout that first year. “After cancelling our April concert and reception, we had five upcoming spring/summer events scheduled (May through September) and one-by-one, each organizer contacted us to cancel,” continues Lane-Fowler. “We normally start planning our next season in August/September and start rehearsing in October, and with no let-up in sight for the pandemic, the Board decided that no events would be scheduled for the remainder of 2020 until things improved and we felt safe to gather again.”

BBB Accredited Charity. Holland Symphony Orchestra (HSO) was also put into a tailspin.

“We were in disbelief,” says HSO President/CEO Kay Walvoord. “First we cancelled the March and April concerts of the spring season. Our fiscal year ends April 30. Then when we realized that this COVID thing was not going to end any time soon, we postponed the entire next season and asked people if they would like to roll over their season tickets to the following year. We already had 500+ season tickets sold. People were given the option of rolling over their season tickets or getting a refund. Only a few asked for a refund. HSO has a very stable and loyal audience base. I think everyone was in shock and the staff and board hardly knew where to start and what to do first.”

The nonprofits continued to adjust to lack of events. Cereal City Concert Band hosted an outdoor concert in October 2020, battling the silence. Despite having a tiny audience, the concert was salve to their souls, proving how important music is to a sense of well-being.

“The weather was very ‘balmy’ for that time of year, so a few musicians asked if we could go somewhere and play outside, keeping our distance,” Lane-Fowler says. We had about half the band there and although we didn’t invite anyone to come listen to us, some brought their family who enjoyed it thoroughly. That day in October brought so much joy to our hearts and was exactly what we needed to keep us going."

Both nonprofits continued to come up with ways to combat the silence. Cereal City Concert Band hosted a virtual concert where 27 members individually videotaped themselves and had a company compile all the videos into a beautifully combined piece. They hosted outdoor events in August and September of 2021. Their first indoor concert was Christmas 2021, providing hand sanitizer, disinfecting wipes and masks to keep the spread of COVID at bay.

HSO also came up with ways to let their patrons know they were “still there.” They put programs/bios/program notes/pre-concert talks online, moved to e-tickets, began to research a new online ticketing/database system for the orchestra, learned how to use zoom for meetings, formed a DEI committee, and made it a point to call all of their ticket holders and donors during the year. They also developed a series of short videos, many posted on YouTube called HSO Intermissions, and updated a book of the first 25 years of HSO’s history with the last five years.

Through those two years there was a marked difference in the fundraising amounts compared to years past for both nonprofits. “We normally receive annual band membership dues, concert proceeds, donations from summer events and annual sponsors, all of which were nonexistent,” shares Lane-Fowler. “Grants were not submitted because our concert season and projects were on hold. Our operating revenue decreased by 73% from FY 2020 to FY 2021.”

The results was worrisome for Lane-Fowler. “I’m very passionate about this group and its continued success. Throughout its 35 years, we have reorganized at least three times and each time it was a challenge to get people back after even a short hiatus. I, as well as the Board, was deeply concerned that after not performing for almost two years, people would lose interest or find other groups, resulting in the dissolution of the band. That was my greatest fear. We’ve worked really hard to get to where we are today and I’m very proud of them. I didn’t want to lose that.”

HSO faced the same challenges. “Our concerts are the primary fundraisers,” says Walvoord. “We did send a year-end letter and did moderately well with donations. We were fortunate to receive an angel gift from a regular donor for $100,000, which allowed us to retain our small staff and even build a deficit budget for the following year. We used the year to re-evaluate many things we do.”

There were also long-reaching changes to Holland Symphony Orchestra due to the pandemic, and along with that comes more adjustments. The League of American Orchestras predicts we may have lost up to 30% or more of our ticket holders,” shares Walvoord. “It may take five years or more to recover. I have cut my budget down 15% in earned income anticipating a lower number of season tickets.”

Cereal City Concert Band also sees the adjustments made by their members and audiences. “Besides the obvious loss of revenue, it was hard on both the musicians and performers for not being able to partake in something they love doing and hard on the audience to not be able to enjoy the performances,” says Lane-Fowler. “Our summer events support many community events and are free, open to the public, such as the Memorial Day Ceremony at Ft. Custer National Cemetery, Fantasy Forest Concert which is part of ‘Believe in Battle Creek’ music series, a lakeside concert at Gull Lake Kellogg Manor House, and a Concert in the Park at an Assisted Living Community. When the band participates in community events and military events, it adds an extra dimension to the event.”

HSO just hosted a concert Sunday, March 20, 2022. Walvoord shares her insight. “Yesterday at the wonderful concert for our Classics Discovery, it was a time to just enjoy moments of beauty, power, joy, majesty. It was a wonderful relief from the news and sadness of the world and all of the political rancor about COVID. An orchestra concert provides opportunities to laugh, relax, enjoy friends, marvel at the sounds you hear. It brings people of different backgrounds together, no matter what their politics are, to enjoy the concert together.”

Concludes Lane-Fowler, “Music brings joy and peace to the soul and people need that now more than ever.”
Cryptocurrency scams jumped from the seventh riskiest scam in 2020 to second riskiest in 2021, according to the 2021 BBB Scam Tracker Risk Report, released on March 7, 2022. More than 66% of people who reported falling victim to a cryptocurrency scam to the BBB Scam Tracker also reported losing money.

The annual study looks at scam data reported to the BBB Scam Tracker™ and combines the number of times a scam was reported, how often it resulted in monetary loss and the amount lost to determine the riskiest scams of 2021. Our survey research found that 98.1% of visitors to BBB Scam Tracker sought to warn others about a scam and 90.9% hoped to bring justice to the perpetrator.

The top 5 riskiest consumer scams in 2021 were:

1. Online Purchase scams
2. Cryptocurrency scams
3. Employment scams
4. Home Improvement scams
5. Investment scams

Online Purchase scams:

Since the start of the pandemic, consumers have done more of their shopping online. This growth has made online purchase scams the top reported scam for the second year in a row. Nearly 75% of those who reported online purchase scams lost money as well. The most popular method scammers used to contact victims were through websites, social media and emails. Puppy scams continued to top the list of products sold in online purchase scams.

In February, a woman from Muskegon County was hoping to buy a Teacup Yorkie through social media. After paying over $1,200 for the puppy and shipping from Ohio, the seller requested more money for shots before the woman realized she had been scammed. The puppy was never delivered and her money was never returned.

Tips to avoid online purchase scams:

- Research before you buy. Look up the business on an independent source (like BBB.org). Do not rely on positive reviews alone.
- Beware of fake websites. Check the URL, watch for bad grammar, search for contact information. Scammers are great at mimicking official seals, fonts and other details.
- If the deal looks too good to be true, it probably is. Scammers offer hard-to-find items and highly sought-after products at great prices.
- Make sure the website is secure. Look for the “https” in the URL (the extra s is for “secure”) and a small lock icon on the address bar. Never enter payment or personal information into a website that is not secure.
- Use secure and traceable transactions and payment methods. Those who pay with a credit card or PayPal are more likely to get their money back. Avoid paying by wire transfer, prepaid money card, gift card, or other non-traditional payment methods.

“As we continue to shop online, exposure to scam sites also increases,” says Lisa Frohnapfel, President and CEO of the Better Business Bureau Serving Western Michigan. “Being vigilant and knowing what scam tactics to watch for can save you not only money, but time and peace of mind as well.”
10 General Tips for AVOIDING A SCAM

1. Never send money to someone you have never met face-to-face.

2. Don’t click on links or open attachments in unsolicited email or text messages.

3. Don’t believe everything you see or read. Scammers are great at mimicking official seals, fonts, and other details. Just because a website or email looks official does not mean it is. Even Caller ID can be faked.

4. Take precautions when making online purchases.
   - Don’t shop on price alone. Scammers offer hard-to-find products at great prices.
   - Don’t buy online unless the transaction is secure. Make sure the website has “https” in the URL (the extra s is for “secure”) and a small lock icon on the address bar. Even then, the site could be shady. Research the company first at BBB.org.
   - Avoid making quick purchases while browsing social media. Scammers advertise websites that offer great deals, but either don’t deliver the product at all or deliver counterfeit products.
   - Do more research on those products you found via online search.

5. Be extremely cautious when dealing with anyone you’ve met online.

6. Never share personally identifiable information with someone who has contacted you unsolicited.

7. Don’t be pressured to act immediately.

8. Use secure, traceable transactions when making payments for goods, services, taxes, and debts.

9. Whenever possible, work with businesses that have proper identification, licensing, and insurance.

10. Be cautious about what you share on social media.

Scams impacting local businesses

It’s not just consumers affected by scams. Businesses are being targeted in a variety of ways.

When targeted by a scam, businesses reported losing money 21.7% of the time. That’s significantly less than consumers. However, these scams can have a big impact on businesses.

The most common and riskiest scam for businesses is also the simplest: fake invoice/supplier bill scams. In many cases scammers simply send what looks like an bill or invoice and hope it gets paid. The invoices are often for office supplies, website or domain hosting services, directory listings, and more.

BBB has heard from a number of businesses about scams such as this. In 2021 several businesses reported being billed for website hosting services they never received. The company was sending solicitations that looked very much like an invoice to renew a service already being used. Some businesses paid and noticed the error when the bill for their usual service came. Others spotted the fake and avoided sending a payment.

Tips for avoiding fake invoice/supplier bill scams:

- Take time to share information about scams targeting businesses with your employees.
- Make sure your business ordered the product/service before payment.
- Double check the company name and address are correct before sending payment.
- Search BBB Scam Tracker to see if somebody has reported the person/fake business for scamming people.

Every dollar sent to a scammer is a dollar not spent at a local business. Scams also undermine trust in the marketplace, leaving consumers to start interactions with businesses expecting to be ripped off. Our marketplace requires both consumers and businesses to be on alert and working together to stop scammers and honor trustworthy relationships.

TOP 5 RISKIEST SCAMS REPORTED BY CONSUMERS

1. ONLINE PURCHASE
Scammers use technology to offer attractive deals, but once the payment is made, no product or service is delivered. In some cases, fraudsters send low-quality or counterfeit products.

2. CRYPTOCURRENCY
Investors are scammed into paying money or trading their own digital assets, known as cryptocurrencies, even though the scammer has no intention of building a company. These scams also involve scenarios in which investors store cryptocurrencies with fraudulent exchanges.

3. EMPLOYMENT
Job applicants are led to believe they are applying for or have just been hired for a promising new job when instead they have given personal information via a fake application or money to scammers for “training” or “equipment.” In another variation, the victim may be “overpaid” with a fake check and asked to wire back the difference.

4. HOME IMPROVEMENT
Door-to-door solicitors offer quick, low-cost repairs and then either take payment without returning, do shoddy work, or “find” issues that dramatically raise the price. These types of schemes often occur after a major storm or natural disaster.

5. INVESTMENT
These scams take many forms, but all prey on the desire to make money without much risk or initial funding. “Investors” are lured with false information and promises of large returns with little or no risk.

More than one third (37.4%) of all scams reported in 2021 were online purchase scams.

- 59.8% reported shopping online more this year as the pandemic continued.
- 46.4% reported spending more time browsing online and/or social media.

Almost 3 out of every 4 (74.9%) of those targeted by online purchase scams reported losing money.

Online scams were more likely to result in a reported monetary loss than those perpetrated in person or via phone.

How do you become BBB Accredited? It’s a question we hear a lot. Oddly, sometimes it comes from businesses that are already BBB Accredited. Those accredited over the past few years probably remember the process. But for a growing number of second and third generation businesses, the owners may not know all that goes into getting a business accredited, and verifying that accreditation each year. Our accreditation team is dedicated to finding and supporting businesses that meet our standards of Trust and Ethics. We work hard to make sure they continue to uphold those standards once accredited.

How it Starts

For many businesses, the process starts when they reach out to the Better Business Bureau, or with a phone call from one of our Business Relations Representatives. These representatives use the information we have in our database to determine if a business meets a set of basic criteria. You have to be at least “B” rated, free of open complaints and government actions, and in business for at least 6 months. The representative then calls and talks with the business owner, verifying information and gathering more information about the business. If it looks like our BBB Accreditation standards are met, they will invite the business to apply for BBB Accreditation. By the time a business applies, they have been reviewed twice by BBB Staff. But this is just the beginning of the work to get a business accredited.

Final Approval

Once all the checks have been done and the business is found to meet BBB Standards, the final step is approval by the BBB Board of Directors. The board consists of local business leaders, and has to approve businesses before they are officially BBB Accredited. Once approved, a business’ account representative will reach out and help the business take advantage of all the benefits that come with BBB Accreditation. But the business and BBB are not finished. Each year the BBB accreditation team reviews businesses as they renew their accreditation to ensure they continue to uphold BBB’s Accreditation Standards.

It’s Not for Everyone

BBB Accreditation is not for everyone. Every day, and at each stage of the process, we find businesses that don’t meet our standards. For example, it’s not uncommon for a business to tell us they have the right licensing, only for us to discover they do not. Sometimes this is due to a lack of understanding on the business’ part, sometimes businesses lie. That is why the BBB puts so much work into verifying information before accreditation, and at the time of renewal. We keep an eye on complaints and patterns to determine if a business is having issues with customers. When possible, we work with the business to resolve the issue. Unfortunately, there are a few times each year we have to suspend and revoke a business’ BBB Accreditation.

We understand that BBB Accreditation means something to consumers and businesses, so it is important that we get it right when we decide who gets to use the BBB seal and who doesn’t. Our goal is to make your business proud of its accreditation.

Tina Kyger is like a lot of business owners. She started her company, CTI Mechanical Contractors in Battle Creek, with her husband, Chad. Over time the company grew from just them to 25 employees. “We love using our business as a vehicle to impact the community,” says Kyger. Giving back is important to them. Whether it’s serving on boards or participating in local community and business groups, Tina Kyger works to make an impact on the Battle Creek community. “It gives me great personal return on my investment,” she says. “I feel like, in our community in particular, we have a lot of very passionate people who come together and really try to do things in this community.” It’s a place she knows well, having been born there and graduating from Harper Creek High School. She lives just down the road from the home where she grew up.

That is one reason Tina agreed to join the Better Business Bureau Board of Directors. She hopes to help the BBB grow its presence and impact in Battle Creek and all of southwest Michigan. “I feel like Battle Creek could use more help in promoting honesty and integrity in its businesses. And I would love to kind of bridge that gap and bring a bigger presence here to our area.”

“I’m excited to be able to say, here’s my experience. Here’s the reason why I almost dropped my Better Business Bureau Accreditation. We had this conversation one year, and I wrote the check anyway, but it was begrudgingly. Now I do it and I love to do it.” Kyger and her business have taken advantage of a number of BBB Accreditation benefits, including advertising. They have seen how BBB can help their business, and want to share that with others.

Outside of work, Kyger likes to spend time with her five children. She can often be found watching one of their sporting events, including soccer, power lifting and swimming. She also likes to golf and says she was born to be a Formula One race car driver.

“I feel like we’ve operated as a business with integrity and honesty. And I feel like the Better Business Bureau puts an exclamation point behind our actions. For people looking to do business with honest companies, reputable companies, I think the Better Business Bureau is a component of that process,” she says. “I’m just a regular person with a small business in little old Battle Creek, but I think I have a lot to offer.”

The Better Business Bureau Serving Western Michigan is governed by a 22-person board of directors, made up of leaders in the business and nonprofit sector. Each is elected by BBB Accredited Businesses to serve up to two consecutive 3-year terms. This is the first year of Kyger’s first term.
